All Majors Career Expo 2018

What To Expect

What really is a Career Expo anyways? Don't people attend these just to get hired? Well, career expos offer a lot more than just a chance to practice your handshake and pass off your resume. More often than not, they provide students with a chance to meet dozens of employers who are representing a wide variety of companies.

Employers are in search of students interested in internships and full-time jobs, but even just walking up and making small talk is enough to keep you on their radar. It's not as scary as it sounds-just show up in business attire, mingle with companies you would be interested in working for, and don't forget to hand them a copy of your resume so they can remember just how awesome you are! What's the worst that can happen? Absolutely nothing. You networked and got your name out there, now you're all the more confident the next time around!

Maria Mulrooney

SPOTLIGHT

Maria is a graduate student in the Higher Education and Student Personnel Masters program. She serves as the Internship Coordinator for the Career Center working 1:1 with students who are searching for an internship, no matter what stage of the process they are at. She also works with students to prepare their application materials, such as critiquing resumes and cover letters and helping students with their interview techniques. Her most recent internship was at Cornell University working with high school students enrolled in college courses. Her favorite part was being able to network with Student Affairs professionals and becoming close friends with the other interns.

Maria's biggest piece of advice she would give to students is to intern at least once before graduation. An internship offers invaluable experience and makes candidates a lot more competitive once the job search ensues. The ability to intern in a field you've always been interested in without having to commit to that field by picking it up as a major is one of the best parts about getting an internship. If you don't know where to begin, you can set up an appointment by calling (662) 915-7174.
